Protect and Manage Mac OS X and Windows Documents

Developers and authors can protect their investment and increase sales by ensuring only licensed customers can use their Mac OS X and Windows documents.

With basic computer skills, anyone can use DocProtect on HTML projects, image collections, video and audio files, PDFs and Excel spreadsheets. DocProtect works independently or in conjunction with the QuickLicense protection system.

PDFs and Spreadsheets

For spreadsheets and PDF files, first use Microsoft Excel or Adobe Acrobat to restrict features like copy, export or save. Now use DocProtect to wrap a protective license around the document. Use the QuickLicense application to configure a Trial, Product or Subscription license and define the activation process.

HTML Documents

An HTML project containing hundreds of files and folders can be compiled into an application with a custom icon. Simply drag the main file onto DocProtect. The application can be password protected or a computer activated license can be applied.

A browser window with back and forward buttons allows link navigation to embedded pages and external Internet pages. Authors can include HTML pages and data from a hidden area of their web site in the protected Mac or Windows desktop application.

Mac or Windows

DocProtect MacOSX is a Universal Binary application for PPC and Intel computers running Mac OS X. DocProtect Windows runs on XP or Vista.

Video and Audio

Use DocProtect on video and audio files of type .mov, .mp3, .mp4, .avi, .dv, .3gp, .m4v, .flc, .alf, .au and .wav. A viewer window based on Apple's QuickTime technology presents the video and audio. It prevents copy or export.

Image Collections

Image files can be collected, named, described and individually password protected. Users can preview images, then click a button to present a vendor web page to purchase the image. Export the original file format including vector images, drawings or CAD files.

Together, DocProtect and QuickLicense provide powerful protection and language customization options. Automate the evaluation, purchase and activation process with a Try, Buy and Register dialog. A vendor can securely block an activated license before issuing a refund.
